

Fund Review In February, the Fund returned (3.8%), as compared to the TSX Venture index and TSX Total Return index, which returned (1.1%) and 0.3% respectively.

We took some profits during the month of February in several precious metal companies after gold spiked higher in response to the Russian invasion of Ukraine.

We continued to add to our resource exposure in February while taking profits in the technology, healthcare and precious metal sectors. A notable addition is Northwest Copper (TSXV:NWST). This was a 'half price sale' from the $20 million flow through financing that the company completed in November 2021 at $1.18 per share. We continue to support companies which contribute to the electrification theme, copper being an important component of this. Northwest Copper has an advanced copper project in northern British Columbia in which they have had ongoing strong drill results. We expect that further drill results will contribute to a much larger resource. We believe that the investors have yet to fully appreciate the scale of the company's resource potential.

Current sector allocations are as follows: 28% technology, 16% life sciences, 13% consumer, 17% precious metals, 15% metals, 3% energy, 8% warrants and 0% shorts.

Outlook The Russian/Ukraine war has recently taken the main stage for equity investors. It is difficult to foresee how the situation will unfold. However, this type of event has historically coincided with a significant market low and turning point for equities.

Governments have begun increasing interest rates as has been widely expected. Anticipation of this has contributed to a meaningful correction, particularly for growth stocks and small cap equities. The TSX Venture index has declined by 28% over the past year. Relative strength for small caps has begun to improve and we believe that this will continue, resulting in small cap outperformance in 2022.

Equity markets do not like uncertainty and we believed that equities would bottom at the time of maximum uncertainty. In our view, this was February 24, the day of Russian invasion that most believed would never happen. Interestingly, this also coincided with a buy signal from our technical analysis work on the February 24th. To date, February 24th has been the equity market low. We are confident that this low will hold and become a major inflection point for equities.

Canadian equities have begun to outperform as we have forecast previously. We are positioned for another bull run for small cap equities in 2022.

Regards,

Steve Palmer, CFA

Investment Strategy

The AlphaNorth Partners Fund Inc. (the "Fund") is a long-biased, small cap hedge fund which focuses primarily on Canadian companies. The Fund's investment objective is to maximize returns over the long term through superior selection of principally Canadian securities. AlphaNorth believes that superior long term investment returns are achievable by exploiting inefficiencies in the Canadian small cap universe through careful security selection on both a long and short basis. Fundamental analysis of companies is used in combination with technical analysis techniques, which has proven to be successful, to assist in the timing of buy/sell decisions. The firm combines both a bottom-up and top-down strategy in the selection of investments offering the best risk/reward characteristics.
